global climate change is one of the greatest environmental threats facing humanity and it is affecting every country on every continent recent evidence confirms a close liaison between climate change induced hazards and the built environment as the built environment demonstrates a high fragility and vulnerability to hazardous situations the impact of climate change is particularly pertinent to the built environment given the life expectancy of buildings and the fact that it is essential to adapt the existing built environment to deal with a climate that may be significantly different from that in which it evolved coastal regions are highly vulnerable to climate change because in addition to changes in temperature precipitation and more frequent flooding they will be affected by rising sea levels wave heights and accelerated coastal erosion the built environment exerts considerable influence over coastal communities local climate and environment coastal areas also tend to be highly populated with many vulnerable urban centres located near the coastal belt in addressing such challenges it is important to better understand the impacts of climate change on the built environment and to develop tangible climate adaptation measures for the built environment physical education teaching and learning efforts obviously target the student like parents teachers administrators and any other directly or indirectly involved parties students do have opinions based on their experience on their respective physical education classes and physical education in general these opinions or so called attitudes are important to research due to their potential of giving insight to the learner's perspective which may also serve as an authentic feedback from the student. This study investigated German secondary school students' attitudes toward physical education. Results have the intention to reveal what attitudes towards physical education German students have and which factors influence these attitudes. The study sample contained students from the different school types: gymnasium, Realschule, and Hauptwerk-Realschule. The students were surveyed via questionnaire that was developed based on validated research instruments from prior studies in the field. Data was analyzed integrating independent variables such as students' gender, physical education grade, grade point average, body mass index, socioeconomic status, type of school, citizenship, and the exercise and physical activity behavior of students, their parents, and their peers.

An estimated 2 billion people live in countries affected by fragility, conflict, and violence. Extreme poverty is increasingly concentrated in these areas, and governments and international agencies seek avenues to enable socio-economic recovery and to support people as they try to rebuild their lives and livelihoods. People Aid and institutions in socio-economic recovery facing fragilities provide an in-depth understanding of people's strategies in the face of conflict and disaster-related fragility and examines how policies and aid interventions enable their socio-economic recovery or fail to do so through field-based research. The book captures the complex and unfolding realities on the ground, exploring the interfaces between economic, social, and institutional change. This provides a rich and unique vantage point from which to reflect on the impact of recovery policies. The book provides a set of cross-cutting findings that aim to inform policy and practice. The detailed case studies of the book lay bare key dynamics of recovery set against the findings from two chapters that review the literature. The cases provide evidence-based lessons for socio-economic recovery. The chapters combine qualitative and quantitative methodologies and form a valuable resource to researchers and postgraduate students of disaster management, conflict, humanitarian aid, and social reconstruction and development management.

Bridging the gap between social and industrial/organizational psychology, Interpersonal Insight offers a practical, engaging introduction to the social cognition processes that lead to insights into ourselves and other people, shaping our perceptions and behavior across a variety of interpersonal situations. From one-on-one interactions to group negotiations, combining important research results and over 12 years' experience in human resources and training, Manuel London describes how processes common to interpersonal situations in organizations can be harnessed to help link, integrate, and create more effective human resource programs. In so doing, he details how social information processing affects a person's self-image, behavior, and quality of interpersonal relationships. London proposes a four-step model of insight formation in which a person 1 receives information about oneself and others called reflected feedback 2 integrates and reconciles the information with other information categorization 3 interprets the information attribution and 4 incorporates the outcome into perceptions of oneself and others cognitive re evaluation of self concept insight occurs when an attribution turns into a re evaluation of oneself or others london goes on to offer practical suggestions on how human resource programs can be designed to enhance self or personal insights and suggests ways to elicit and track employees reactions to major organizational and career changes while facilitating team development packed with case studies and references to the literature interpersonal insight is an important book not only for researchers and professionals in industrial organizational psychology but for managers interested in enhancing employee satisfaction and production
